RE: Support for the Help Separated Families Act of 2012

Dear Member of Congress:

We, the undersigned organizations, urge you to support the Help Separated Families Act, legislation introduced by Congresswoman Lucille Roybal-Allard (D-CA-34). The bill aims to improve the likelihood that children placed in the child welfare system as a result of immigration enforcement actions against their parents can ultimately reunify with their parents.

The statistics clearly demonstrate that immigration enforcement activities are tearing families apart, sometimes permanently. In the first six months of 2011, the Department of Homeland Security reported that more than 46,000 parents of U.S. citizen children had been removed from the United States. Another report issued by the Applied Research Center revealed that approximately 5,100 children are currently in the child welfare system due to a parent's detention or removal.

When a child enters the child welfare system, reunification efforts are often complicated by disconnects between the immigration system and state child welfare systems. It is considered a child welfare best practice to place children separated from their parents with other family members, yet many child welfare agencies refuse to place children with otherwise qualified relative caregivers just because they are undocumented. In addition, parents who are detained or removed by immigration authorities are often unable to participate in family court hearings or meet case plan requirements, sometimes resulting in the inappropriate termination of their parental rights.

Congresswoman Roybal-Allard's Help Separated Families Act addresses several barriers to reunification. The bill prohibits immigration status alone from being a factor in child placement determinations. It also clarifies that certain forms of foreign identification are sufficient for purposes of a background check. The bill also ensures that questions about caregivers' immigration status are limited to purposes of eligibility for relevant programs or services and allows for waivers of certain requirements that would prevent the placement of a child with a relative due to a minor legal infraction. Finally, the bill prevents child welfare agencies from filing for termination of parental rights in cases where a parent's involvement in immigration proceedings is the main reason a child is in foster care, unless certain conditions are met.

These procedures are critical to ensuring that children who are separated from their parents as a result of immigration enforcement measures are not permanently and unnecessarily torn apart from their parents or other family members. We therefore urge you to support the Help Separated

Families Act and ensure that child welfare practice upholds the principles of child well-being and family unity.

Sincerely,
